down the street and Brown covered the distance between the bedside and the start of the most popular.

Prof. Knowlson, principal of the high school, declares that the attitude of ostracism proscribed against the young bride is unwarranted. He declares that the attitude of ostracism proscribed against the young bride is unwarranted. He declares that she has very right to finish her course in the school, and that if she quits it in the school, and that if she quits it will be of her own accord.

Mrs. Griggs has been selected as one of the Commencement Day speakers, and the school authorities will not prevent her taking the part assigned.

The Griggs boy, after his bride had been taken away by her father, went to Terryville, Conn., where his family have a summer home, and where he found an aide in his aunt, Mrs. A. R. Cook. The aunt found him a job in the shoop of a locksmith, and he was on his way to work when arrested on the perjury charge preferred by Danbury officials. He declared that he did not know it was a serious matter to misstate ages in applying for a license to marry.

The people who are trying to keep us apprt will be sorry some day, was all Griggs would say after his arrest.

dents, through some strange idea of proper high school form, resent having a married woman in the graduating class.

They took steps today to have Mrs. Griggs eliminated from the class picture. As Miss McLean she was known as the prettiest girl in the class, and as the prettiest girl in the class, and second as thought of giving chase as he was, but he caught himself just in time.

But when Brown reached for his trousers they were missing from their accustomed place. Likewise his coat and his shoes. The burglar was far down the street and Brown covered the distance between the bedside and the army force in one bound. Thank here.
